FINEST AUTOMOBILE ON PACIFIC COAST

J. Grant Crumley boasts of the finest automobile on the Pacific coast which he brought home on his return from a three weeks' vacation. The car is a Stearns-Knight, rated at 90 horsepower, and of the eight cylinder variety, equipped with an accelerator that can throw the speed up to the 100-mile notch. The car is a beauty and is the only one in either California or Nevada, as it was sent to San Francisco as a model of the latest and was instantly purchased by Mr. Crumley. The color is a deep mauve, similar to what is used for all automobiles in the United States army service. The hood has ventilating devices by which a current of cold air is delivered at the end of the radiator to assist in cooling the feet of passengers occupying the front seat. Then there is a locking device which closes the moment the Yale key is taken from the lock. The rear compartment is furnished with a frosted glass globe inserted in the paneling to light the footboard and prevent tripping on entering after dark.

NEW MANAGER OF THE GAS COMPANY

A. O'B. Browne with his wife and son arrived last evening by auto from Visalia, Cal., to take charge of the plant and office of the Nevada Gas company vice H. C. Dowler, the present manager, who goes to join the Y. M. C. A. secretarial field forces.

Mr. Browne is one of the best men engaged by the Pacific Gas company, which controls the Tonopah plant, and was promoted to this office on account of his well known technical ability.

The new manager reports that crude oil is steadily advancing and now costs over 100 per cent more than was paid a year ago. Mr. Browne said he was very fortunate in crossing the Mojave desert as the temperature was much lower than usual at this season of the year.

crowd that fell in behind a couple of drums and fife furnished by the Tonopah Drum corps and the demonstration that kept up for thirty minutes began. Everybody in town appeared to get there as if by magic, for they poured in from every side street as fast as autos could carry them. It was a rousing celebration for which Nature furnished the fireworks with an accompaniment of vivid lightning that flashed throughout the whole proceedings, illuminating the streets more effectively than any artificial means could have done. A small barefoot boy led the parade throughout its evolutions and never surrendered his position until the parade finally rounded up at the Liberty loan transparency at Brougher avenue, where the crowd sang "The Star Spangled Banner" with much feeling.

Harry Atkinson was pushed up to the top of the stand and spoke on the great reason Nevada had for celebrating this victory since this state had done more proportionately in men, money and marbles to uphold the hands of the president. In conclusion he said there was good reason for believing the Kaiser at that moment was wiring for a fresh supply of towels and ice to bandage his head. This rally was greeted with wild applause and the crowd dispersed after giving three cheers and a tiger for the allies.

Half Score Killed in a Desert Tragedy

The death of John D. Sullivan, which occurred near Fallon July 12, revived memories of one of the most thrilling melodramas ever enacted in the west.

It is a story of a husband's jealousy, of the murder of a half score of innocent people and of the incredible courage of a woman, the whole forming a drama that if seen on the movie screens today would be set down as the product of the vivid imagination of a highly paid scenario writer.

The opening scene of this tragedy was laid in Lovelock about twenty-five years ago and there are in Fallon today a few whose recollection of the horrors surrounding the awful affair is as distinct as if the events were those of yesterday.

Among these Thos. Dolf recounts with minute detail the incidents attending every feature of the bloody tragedy, the names of the leading actors being well known to him.

The time was the period when the stage ran from Lovelock to Boyer's ranch and the driver of the stage that figured in the case was found brutally murdered in his bed, suspicion at once falling upon the husband of a woman with whom the unfortunate victim was supposed to be too friendly.

Knowing the urgency of the mails being carried on schedule time this woman with rare courage declared that she would drive the stage and mounting the box directed the passengers to take their seats and started on the trip that was to end so tragically, handling the four horses with the skill of a seasoned driver.

Among the passengers was the son of J. D. Sullivan, whose funeral was held here last week, but who never survived the full journey of that day. As the stage rounded a point on the road shots were rained upon it from a distance and at the end of the fusillade not one soul was left alive with the exception of the woman driver whose life was spared for a purpose that subsequently developed. The murderer, satisfied that his thirst for human life had left none other to tell the tale but the woman, approached the stage and to her horror her worst fears were realized as in this monster she discovered her own husband.

With his gun at his side he mounted the seat and commanded this fearless woman to drive with her key freight toward Boyer's ranch, it being his evident intention to leave the stage at a familiar point on the road after adding his wife to his list of victims.

The mind of this wonderful woman did not permit her courage to forsake her and doubtless convinced of his designs upon her own life sought to circumvent them and as they approached a spring or watering place on the road, with a cunning and persuasiveness that would have done credit to a trained diplomat, induced her husband to dismount and water the team.

Her plans had been carefully outlined and as her husband was engaged at the spring with the team she quickly grasped the gun she had slipped away from him and with deadly aim shot him dead.

Were there not living testimony to bear out the facts of this bloody tragedy the story of the rounding up of the team and hitching them to the stage and the drive to Boyer's ranch would be received with skepticism, but the climax of this bloody drama rests in the fact that the woman drove the stage to its usual stopping place at Boyer's ranch when the almost unbelievable evidence met the gaze of the horrified onlookers, the lifeless bodies of the passengers being strewn about the bottom of the stage.

It is not to be wondered at that the story of the bravery of this woman found its way into every corner of the state and for many years formed the topic of conversation at fireside and cabin.—Churchill Standard.

AMUSEMENTS

TODAY AT THE BUTLER

The world's kiddie star, charming little Madge Evans, will be one of the attractions at the Butler today in "Wanted a Mother," and all of her many friends will be simply fascinated with this offering as it is one of the most pleasing, most thoroughly entertaining productions in which this delightful little actress has yet been seen. It is the sort of attraction that grown-ups like particularly, while the children simply go wild over her. The story deals with the efforts of a motherless little girl to find a dear lady who will, in part, take the place of her own dead mother. This effort leads to startling adventures and a surprising climax. You are sure to like it. But this is by no means all of today's program, for "Fatty" Arbuckle, the king of mirth, will be here, big as life, in one of his latest two-reel fun-makers entitled "Out West," making a seven-reel program which is sure to please all who see it.

Tomorrow, beautiful Ethel Clayton, in "The Web of Desire," and Pearl White, in "The House of Hate."

Coming, Wednesday, Harold Lockwood, in "Broadway Bill," a good one.
